

Our speakers have addressed everyone from Congress and the UN Commission on Human Rights to schools, religious groups, and local communities across the nation. Their unique perspective, as people who have either experienced slavery and genocide or witnessed it firsthand, have made for powerful presentations and opened the door to inspiring discussion. Their remarkable stories of tragedy and triumph have made a global problem immediate in small towns and major cities alike.